NEW QUESTION: 1

Jane, a security administrator, has been tasked with explaining authentication services to the company's management team. The company runs an active directory infrastructure. Which of the following solutions BEST relates to the host authentication protocol within the company's environment?

- A. Least privilege
- B. TACACS+
- C. Kerberos
- D. LDAP

Answer: C

Explanation:

Kerberos was accepted by Microsoft as the chosen authentication protocol for Windows 2000 and Active Directory domains that followed.

Incorrect Answers:

B. Least privilege requires that users are allowed only the minimum required access, permissions, and privileges necessary to complete their work tasks. Furthermore, it is not an authentication protocol.

C. TACACS+ is a protocol that uses the authentication, authorization, and accounting (AAA) architecture. It is used for remote authentication.

D. LDAP allows clients to access resources within a directory service.

Any group, whether it is a security group or a distribution group, is characterized by a scope that identifies the extent to which the group is applied in the domain tree or forest.

The boundary, or reach, of a group scope is also determined by the domain functional level setting of the domain in which it resides. There are three group scopes: universal, global, and domain local.

The following table describes the differences between the scopes of each group.

When to use groups with domain local scope Groups with domain local scope help you define and manage access to resources within a single domain. For example, to give five users access to a particular printer, you can add all five user accounts in the printer permissions list. If, however, you later want to give the five users access to a new printer, you must again specify all five accounts in the permissions list for the new printer.
