NEW QUESTION: 1

When you update records in multiple locations or you make a copy of the whole database at a remote location as a way to achieve the proper level of fault-tolerance and redundancy, it is known as?

- A. Shadowing
- B. Backup
- C. Archiving
- D. Data mirroring

Answer: A

Explanation:

Explanation/Reference:

Explanation:

Database Shadowing is one type of transaction redundancy solution whereby a full copy of the user's database is maintained at an alternate information processing facility.

Incorrect Answers:

B: Data mirroring does not necessarily use a remote location. Data mirroring mirrors data to another server, or to another hard drive on the same server, on the local network.

C: A backup solution would not handle database records. It handles data at the file level.

D: An archiving solution would not handle database records. It handles data at the file level.
