NEW QUESTION: 3
You and your team have been working on a new application over the past couple weeks. While it's still in development, it's becoming a bit costly for your limited budget. The entire team had a meeting on Friday to talk about how to save money until you're able to launch. One of your team members suggested shutting down some services overnight and during the weekend. Though no official decision was made before leaving for the weekend, a junior team member sent out an email saying he found a solution to the problem.
When arriving at the office on Monday, you find that your project is no longer in the drop-down inside the Console.
What's the most likely reason for the missing project?
A. The project was moved to another account.
B. The engineer removed the project and attached all of the resources directly to the Organization.
C. Your trial credits expired, and the project was removed.
D. The engineer clicked the "shut down" link thinking it was like a light switch that he could toggle on and off.
