NEW QUESTION: 3
What is considered the most important type of error to avoid for a biometric access control system?
A. Type II Error
B. Crossover Error Rate
C. Type I Error
D. Combined Error Rate
Answer: A
Explanation:
When a biometric system is used for access control, the most important error is the false accept or false acceptance rate, or Type II error, where the system would accept an impostor. A Type I error is known as the false reject or false rejection rate and is not as important in the security context as a type II error rate. A type one is when a valid company employee is rejected by the system and he cannot get access even thou it is a valid user. The Crossover Error Rate (CER) is the point at which the false rejection rate equals the false acceptance rate if your would create a graph of Type I and Type II errors. The lower the CER the better the device would be. The Combined Error Rate is a distracter and does not exist.
