What does the HP Power Regulator for ProLiant servers control?

- A. p-states
- B. dynamic power
- C. smart link
- D. fan speed

Answer: A

Explanation:

Server processors from Intel and AMD have performance state registers that can switch a processor between different performance states (P-states). Through HP Power Regulator technology, HP firmware or the OS can access and change the P-states.

Changing the performance state (the processor frequency and voltage) directs processors to operate at different power levels. This gives you some control over total system power consumption. Tables 1 and 2 show examples of P-states for Intel XeonR and AMD Opteron processors.
