NEW QUESTION: 1

Your company has a server that runs Windows Server 2008 R2. Active Directory Certificate Services (AD CS) is configured as a standalone Certification Authority (CA) on the server. You need to audit changes to the CA configuration settings and the CA security settings.

Which two tasks should you perform? (Each correct answer presents part of the solution. Choose two.)

- A. Enable auditing of successful and failed attempts to write to files in the %SYSTEM32%\CertLog directory.
- B. Enable auditing of successful and failed attempts to change permissions on files in the %SYSTEM32% \CertSrv directory.
- C. Enable the Audit Object Access setting in the Local Security Policy for the Active Directory Certificate Services (AD CS) server.

D. Configure auditing in the Certification Authority snap-in.

Answer: C,D

Explanation:

In order to audit changes to CA settings you must enable Audit Object Access on the CA itself. Like with other auditing procedures, however, this alone will not perform the audit; it only allows audits to take place on the server.

In order for auditing to start, you must configure auditing on the CA using the Certification Authority snap-in.

The CertLog and CertSrv directories contain the log and application files, respectively, associate with certificate services. Auditing access to these files will not allow you to be aware of specific configuration and security settings that are changed.
