View the Exhibit and examine the structure of the SALES table. The following query is written to retrieve all those product IDs from the SALES table that have more than 55000 sold and have been ordered more than 10 times.

Which statement is true regarding this SQL statement?

- A. It executes successfully but produces no result because COUNT(prod_id) should be used instead of COUNT(*) .
- B. It executes successfully and generates the required result.
- C. It produces an error because COUNT(*) should be only in the HAVING clause and not in the WHERE clause.
- D. It produces an error because COUNT(*) should be specified in the SELECT clause also.

Answer: C

Explanation:

Restricting Group Results with the HAVING Clause You use the HAVING clause to specify the groups that are to be displayed, thus further restricting the groups on the basis of aggregate information.

In the syntax, `group_condition` restricts the groups of rows returned to those groups for which the specified condition is true.

The Oracle server performs the following steps when you use the `HAVING` clause:

- 1.Rows are grouped.
- 2.The group function is applied to the group.
- 3.The groups that match the criteria in the `HAVING` clause are displayed.

The `HAVING` clause can precede the `GROUP BY` clause, but it is recommended that you place the `GROUP BY` clause first because it is more logical. Groups are formed and group functions are calculated before the `HAVING` clause is applied to the groups in the `SELECT` list.

Note: The `WHERE` clause restricts rows, whereas the `HAVING` clause restricts groups.
