NEW QUESTION: 1

Stu Pede is an agent with broker-dealer Cavalier. A customer calls with a request to establish a classic IRA and asks for Stu's advice regarding where the money in the IRA should be invested. Stu suggests a municipal bond fund, explaining to his client that the interest income earned on it will be tax-free at the federal level, and some of it may even be tax-free at the state and local levels.

Has Stu engaged in any prohibited practices?

- A. No. Although Stu has given investment advice, it was solicited by the client, and Stu received no additional compensation for the advice.
- B. Yes. Stu is an agent with a broker-dealer. He is not an investment adviser representative and is not allowed to make recommendations regarding investments to the firm's clients.
- C. No. Although municipal bonds are not suitable investments for a classic IRA, Stu obviously didn't know this and is merely guilty of stupidity.
- D. Yes. Municipal bonds are not suitable investments for a classic IRA, and Stu can have his license revoked or suspended.

Answer: D

Explanation:

Explanation/Reference:

Explanation: Yes. When Stu recommends an investment in municipal bonds for a classic IRA account, he has made an unsuitable recommendation, which is a prohibited practice, and he can have his license revoked or suspended. Municipal bonds are not suitable investments for a classic IRA because municipal bonds pay interest that is at least free from federal taxation, so they offer a lower yield than fully taxable bonds of similar risk. The money in a classic IRA grows tax-free anyway, so the client is getting a lower yield with no benefit.
