NEW QUESTION: 1
You have a server that has Exchange Server 2013 installed.
You plan to configure Unified Messaging (UM) to connect to an IP-PBX.
A Telecommunications Administrator configures the following numbers on the IP-PBX:
-First extension number: 12100
-Last extension number: 12499
-Help extension number: 12500
-Incoming pilot number: 12000
You need to configure UM to support the following requirements:
Users must be able to use Outlook Voice Access.
Users must be able to receive voice mail when callers connect to the users' extension.
Callers must be able to dial into an automated help system hosted by your company, which uses standard menus and Speech-Enabled menus.

Which numbers should you use for the UM configurations?
(To answer, drag the appropriate number to the correct UM object in the answer area.
Each number may be used once, more than once, or not at all.
Additionally, you may need to drag the split bar between panes or scroll to view content.)
Select and Place:

Answer:

Explanation:
Box 1: 12000
Box 2: 12500
Box 3: 12000
Note:
An Outlook Voice Access number lets a user who is enabled for Unified Messaging (UM) and voice mail access their mailbox using Outlook Voice Access. When you configure an Outlook Voice Access or subscriber access number on a dial plan, UM-enabled users can call in to the number, sign in to their mailbox, and access their email, voice mail, calendar, and personal contact information.
By default, when you create a UM dial plan, an Outlook Voice Access number isn't configured. To configure an Outlook Voice Access number, you first need to create the dial plan, and then configure an Outlook Voice Access number under the dial plan's Outlook Voice Access option.
Although an Outlook Voice Access number isn't required, you need to configure at least one Outlook Voice Access number to enable a UM-enabled user to use Outlook Voice Access to access to their Exchange 2013 mailbox. You can configure multiple Outlook Voice Access numbers for a single dial plan.
After you create a Unified Messaging (UM) auto attendant, incoming calls to an external telephone number that a human operator would ordinarily answer are answered by the auto attendant. Unlike with other Unified Messaging components, such as UM dial plans and UM IP gateways, you aren't required to create UM auto attendants. However, auto attendants help internal and external callers locate users or departments that exist in an organization and transfer calls to them.
Hunt group is a term used to describe a group of Private Branch eXchange (PBX) or IP PBX extension numbers that are shared by users. Hunt groups are used to efficiently distribute calls into or out of a specific business unit. Creating and defining a hunt group minimizes the chance that a caller who places an incoming call will receive a busy signal when the call is received. In a telephony network, a PBX or an IP PBX can be configured to have a single hunt group or multiple hunt groups. Each hunt group created on a PBX or IP PBX must have an associated pilot number. Using a pilot number helps to eliminate busy signals and to route incoming calls to the extension numbers that are available. The PBX or IP PBX uses the pilot number to locate the hunt group and in turn to locate the telephone extension number on which the incoming call was received and the extensions that are assigned to the hunt group. Without a defined pilot number, the PBX or IP PBX can't locate where the incoming call was received.

NEW QUESTION: 4
Which two attributes describe UDP within a TCP/IP network? (Choose two.)
A. connectionless communication
B. acknowledgments
C. increased headers
D. connection-oriented communication
E. unreliable delivery
Answer: A,E
Explanation:
Explanation/Reference:
Explanation:
UDP Characteristics
presents the structure of a UDP segment header. Because UDP is considered to be an unreliable protocol, it lacks the sequence numbering, window size, and connectionless acknowledgment numbering present in the header of a TCP segment.
Rather the UDP segment's
Because a UDP segment header is so much smaller than a TCP segment header, UDP becomes a good candidate for the transport layer protocol serving applications that need to maximize bandwidth and do not require acknowledgments.
